Take a Quantum Leap!

My Theory About How We Can Manifest Our Dreams

by Nannette Rodin

Quantum Theory has given us the idea that electrons seem to disappear from one location and reappear in a different place as they move around the nucleus of an atom. Where do they go? I have an idea.

Here is an allegory from the classic book Flatland by Edwin A. Abbott (1880, reissued 1984) that does a fantastic job of describing the challenges we encounter when trying to understand multiple dimensions and the limitations of our perceptions of reality.

Imagine that you are a sentient straight line (a continuum of dots with consciousness). When you meet another conscious dot, you can see the whole dot. But all that other dot can see of you is a single dot in your line, not the whole line. If you, as a line, meet a square plane, all you can see is one line of that square. The lesson in both cases: how can you conceive of more than your dimension(s)?

Going back to the electrons...when the electrons disappear from our three dimensions, are they going to another 'place' where energy becomes matter and matter becomes energy, when affected by the field of thought and feeling? Is this a place from which we can influence what we know as reality? Like the dot looking at the line, or the line looking at the square plane, we can only imagine from our space of three dimensions how the other dimensions operate. Fortunately, many great thinkers throughout history have given us instructions on how we might access this special place. Could imagination be the key?

Are you ready to take a leap? If you have been considering making a change in your life, here is an exciting opportunity to work with the laws of the Universe. Try visualizing and feeling your new reality into existence. Create new beliefs and watch them become apparent. Jerry and Esther Hicks, authors of the book Ask and It Is Given, state that you can manifest a button or a castle with the same amount of effort. What are you choosing to create? You are not stuck in your 'box.' Dream what you would really like and take the leap!
